

The trend toward media consolidation is one of the most dangerous affecting our country. The FCC must take action. What better way to start than forcing Sinclair Broadcasting to live up to its obligation too serve the public interest.

Sinclair's decision to force its stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election must be countered with an order to balance that decision.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line and less of what we need for our democracy. Instead of something produced at "News Central" far away, it's more important that we see real people from our own communities and more substantive news about issues that matter.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
